The Minneapolis Foundation's Work on Criminal Justice Reform

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. – The Minneapolis Foundation stands with this community’s overwhelming calls for dramatic police reform, now. Our ongoing investments in criminal justice reform include grantmaking, events and learning collectives, research, advocacy and policy work, including increased police accountability.

Within our broad body of ongoing work on criminal justice reform, we have identified two additional opportunities to date for action on Minneapolis police reform:

- Potential investments in research-based technology to track officer performance and promote early intervention when problematic behavior is detected.
- Leveraging our national network of experts on criminal justice reform, connecting these experts with local civic and community leaders, including the City of Minneapolis.

Going forward, we will continue to listen closely to our partners across the community, especially those most impacted by racial injustice.
